

ALTUSCIO NETWORKS LAUNCHES NEW WEBSITE WITH IMPROVED ONLINE HELP DESK AND CUSTOMER SUPPORT FEATURES

(Atlanta, GA) January 06, 2010. Altuscio Networks (Altuscio), an Atlanta-based full service Information Technology (IT) company supporting small and medium sized business throughout the greater Atlanta area, announced the launch of its new website at www.altuscio.com today. The completely redesigned site features easier access to online tech support for existing clients as well as new customers who need immediate IT support, and more comprehensive information about the products and services offered by the company. The site is structured so that any customer can learn about "Managed IT Services & Support," "Business Solutions," "Hosted IT Solutions" and general "Support," all in a simple user interface that is easy to navigate.

According to Mr. Ben Silliman, CEO of the company, "We have been developing the new site for the last several months, keeping our client's need for quick access to tech support at the forefront, but also focusing on improving the product information, branding and overall usefulness of the site. The online support functions are now tied to the new back office and upgraded tech support systems so our staff can work with online clients more effectively and our customers will see immediate results.

Tom Raymond, VP Sales & Development states, "The new site has a great deal of easy to understand information for current clients and prospective customers who want to learn more about our products and services, and we expect to continue to expand the availability of supporting materials, white papers, case studies and more; all in an effort to better communicate why Altuscio Networks is the IT company of choice in the Atlanta market." Silliman added, "We hope that our customers appreciate all the new features and we expect to continue to hone the website, adding features, new products and more information, as a regular practice; so it is always fresh and current."
